OF LOVE, ACCEPTANCE,

welcome

Three years in, and Sherborne Pride continues to grow beyond anything we could have imagined.

What started as a bold idea has become a vibrant celebration of love, acceptance, and community, right here in the heart of our small rural town. It still takes a whole village to raise a rainbow, and we remain incredibly grateful for the generosity, kindness, talent, and time given by so many wonderful people. From sponsors and volunteers to local businesses, performers, community groups, and supporters from near and far, every person involved helps make Sherborne Pride what it is today. Together, we've created something truly special: a day that's fun, safe, inclusive, and fabulously colourful. Whether you're joining us for the first time or returning for another year, we're so glad you're here.

SHERBORNE

An incredible day full of love and the coming together of our beautiful community - in full colour! If you've enjoyed yourself and are able to contribute towards the cost of making it a free event to all, then we'd love a donation. Thanks so much!

A large, vibrant rainbow flag is the central focus, held high by a crowd of people. The flag's colors—red, orange, yellow, green, blue, and purple—are bright and saturated. The people holding the flag are seen from the waist down, wearing various casual clothing like jeans, shorts, and sneakers. The background is slightly blurred, showing more of the crowd and the outdoor setting of the event.

why pride matters

It's hard to fully describe just how important Pride events are, not just for the LGBTQIA+ community, but their families, allies, and all of us. It's about creating a loving and accepting world that we all want to live in.

Pride runs deeper than waving a rainbow flag in a colourful parade. It's about reclaiming a right to exist unapologetically, being free to express yourself authentically and feel accepted, and celebrating a community coming together in love, against hate.

For some, these events are a safe haven in a world that often tells them they're wrong for simply being themselves – for existing. Pride is a reminder that we're not alone; it's a beacon of hope, showing us that progress is possible and that our voices matter.

It's about representation and providing role models for marginalised communities. Seeing ourselves in others empowers us to dream and believe in a world where love triumphs over hate.

boogie wonderland

The chart-topping duo behind noughties dancefloor favourites Boogie 2Nite, Shine, Some Kinda Rush and Don't Mess With My Man are bringing their feel-good anthems to Pageant Gardens this summer.

With a catalogue packed full of pop perfection and club classics, Cherise Roberts and Nadia Shepherd have spent almost two decades getting crowds on their feet and singing along.

Dust off your dancing shoes, warm up those vocal cords, and get ready for a headline set to remember.

Long before they became Booty Luv, Cherise Roberts and Nadia Shepherd were making waves as members of pioneering R&B group Big Brovaz. But in 2006, what began as a one-off recording of a club track called Boogie 2Nite quickly took on a life of its own.

“bringing people together, one dancefloor at a time”

The song became a huge hit, climbing the charts and turning the duo into one of the UK’s most recognisable dance acts almost overnight. A string of fan favourites followed, including Shine, Don’t Mess With My Man and Some Kinda Rush, helping define the soundtrack of a generation of nights out.

With their infectious blend of dance, pop and R&B, Booty Luv became regulars on charts, club playlists and festival stages, earning a loyal following that continues to this day. Nearly twenty years on, their music still fills dancefloors and brings people together in the same way it always has.

Now they’re heading to Sherborne Pride to help us celebrate love, community and unapologetic joy. And if history tells us anything, it’ll be impossible not to dance.

the history of Pride

On 1 July 1972 the UK's first Pride march was held in London. This date was chosen as the nearest Saturday to the anniversary of the riots, or uprising, at the Stonewall Inn in 1969, where LGBT+ patrons had been targeted by the New York Police Department. Liberation organisations were inspired to action, and Pride marches have since become annual events throughout the UK and around the world.

Pride around the UK

Whilst London was the first UK city to hold a Pride event, this timeline shows a selection of milestone pride events in the UK:

- 1973: The Sussex Gay Liberation Front marched through Brighton, followed by a “Gay Dance” at the Royal Albion Hotel.
 - 1979: Liverpool held its first Gay Pride Week.
 - 1983: Birmingham hosted ‘five days of fun’ at various venues with ‘It’s a Knockout’-style competitions.
 - 1985: Manchester Pride began as the Gay Pub and Club Olympics with boat races down the river and drag queens judging egg and spoon races.
 - 1991: In Belfast about 100 people with helium balloons attended a Pride parade, having to keep their route a secret to avoid protestors.
 - 1992: London hosted ‘Europride’, attended by 100,000 people and described by the local news as ‘the lesbian and gay event of the decade’.
 - 1995: Following a number of smaller events in the 1980s, including ‘Lark in the Park’ to protest section 28 laws, Scotland’s first large-scale Pride event was held. The march through Edinburgh ended with a festival in the Meadows.
 - 1997: Birmingham Pride was officially launched.
 - 1999: Cardiff Mardi Gras—now known as Pride Cymru’s Big Weekend—was held on 4 September in conjunction with a national police conference. The police aimed to work with the community following a rise in hate crimes against LGBT+ people in south Wales.
 - 2010: Liverpool was the largest UK city to not have an ‘official’ annual Pride until its council-affiliated Pride march was established in 2010, held on the closest weekend to the anniversary of the murder of 18-year-old gay man Michael Causer in 2008.
 - 2024: Sherborne got its own Pride!!
